LONDON, September 18.

THE negotiations so long carried on between our Court and the Cabinet of France, it now appears, from something more strong than the mere evidence of conjecture, are rapidly approaching to a conclusion. The last dispatches from France are found, we learn, to be of so much importance as to be the subject of a division this day in a Council, consisting of all his Majesty's Ministers, who are to be convened for that purpose at Lord Hawkesbury's Office. The result of their deliberation is to be transmitted to the Sovereign at Weymouth, and when it is functioned by his approval, it is to be conveyed by Messengers in waiting to the different Courts of Europe.

It has been rumoured that the Chief Consul, if he carry his menace of invasion into execution at all, will not attempt it till winter. Whether he attempt it in winter or summer, at noon-day or in the night, the result, we have no doubt, will be total discomfiture and complete defeat. But it is the duty of prudence to arm against an enemy even if he does not fear him; and though a man may not dread the threats of a madman, who talks of turning him out of his house, yet still he will be wise enough to guard his door.—Government, we understand, have determined upon a plan of defence more comprehensive in its nature, more vigorous in its operation, and more immediate in its effect, than any that has yet been devised. The Duke of York's late tour related to it; and it was deemed necessary that the Commander in Chief should personally inspect the coast before the plan was settled.—The plan is said to be to arm all persons capable of service, from the age of sixteen to sixty, with pikes, in the districts along the coast, most liable to any sudden descent of the enemy.

Admiral Cornwallis has kept the blockade of Brest more strict than any of his predecessors.—The gallant Admiral has not been on shore during the last twenty-two weeks, nor do we believe that the Ville de Paris has been more than one day in port within that period.

It appears in an article dated Madrid, August 15, that the Court of Portugal has appointed Mr. Frere to treat with the French Ambassador (Bonaparte's brother) to that Court, on a definitive Peace between Portugal and France, and Mr. Frere had arrived on the 13th ultimo in Madrid for that purpose. In the mean time the French army continue its route towards the frontiers of Portugal. The French Funds have experienced a depression within these few days.

The trade of Russia begins to resume its ancient splendor. The exportation from Riga alone amounted, at the end of July last, to 6,770,638 roubles; and the exports from the port of Petersburgh for England exclusively, amounted to 2,509,853 roubles, of the sole produce of Russia.

Some letters from Germany state that the scheme of indemnifications is supposed to be formed entirely at the expence of the Ecclesiastical States, and that most of the Hereditary Princes will be indemnified even beyond their losses. Among the number of these are Cassel, Darmstadt, Baden, and even Bavaria. It is said to be proposed by Prussia to create four new Electorates instead of the three Ecclesiastical ones that will be extinguished; these to be two Protestant, Cassel and Orange; and two Catholic, at the head of which will be the Archduke Charles as head of the Teutonick Order, and the Grand Duke of Tuscany. These arrangements, however, would upon the whole weaken the influence of Austria in the Empire, and in the same proportion strengthen that of Prussia.

The Elector of Bavaria is one of those few Princes who intends to be fully indemnified in consequence of his treaty with the French Republic. This Elector, while Duke of Deux Ponts, was notoriously attached to French principles; and altho' on his succeeding to the Electorate, he may have thought proper to express his sentiments for a time, yet his present partiality for the French has too plainly appeared; for in direct violation of that duty which he owes to his Sovereign, the Emperor, he has not hesitated to make a separate peace with the enemies of his country, in order to secure himself better terms on the approaching division of territorial plunder.

A very handsome range of apartments is now building for Prince Adolphus, at St. James's; and on the meeting of Parliament, Mr. Addington is to apply for 12,000l. per annum to be settled on his Royal Highness.

Captain Parker, Lord Nelson's Aid-de-Camp, who was wounded in the thigh at Boulogne, suffered amputation yesterday at Deal, and his Physician, Dr. Baird, considers him in as favourable a state as can be expected.

OXFORD, SEPTEMBER 19.

On Monday last Richard Weston, Esq. was a second time elected to serve the office of Mayor for this city; when Mr. Thomas Eaton, Grocer, and Mr. Simon Brown, Brazier and Tinman, were chosen Bailiffs for the ensuing year.

Same day Joseph Brooks, Esq. was elected Mayor for the borough of New Woodstock; and Mr. James Nicholls and Mr. Richard Cross, Chamberlains for the year ensuing.

The Rev. Edward Jones, A. M. is instituted to the Vicarage of Brockworth, in the diocese of Gloucester, on the presentation of the Bishop of Durham, and on the death of the Reverend John Chester.

On Sunday evening last died Mr. George Watkins, a respectable Farmer, of Ensham, in this county.—After eating his supper, apparently in good health, he complained of a violent pain in his stomach, was put to bed, and expired in a short time afterwards.

Monday evening died Mr. Matthew Douch, Victualler, of St. Giles's, in this city, aged 51.

Tuesday morning last died, aged fifty-five, Mr. Ephraim Ward, many years Proprietor of the Stage Waggons from this city to London.

On Tuesday last died, aged twenty, after a lingering illness, which he bore with great fortitude and resignation, Mr. William Almond Austin, second son of the late William Austin, Esq. of Kidlington, in this county.

On Thursday the 10th instant Mr. Sutton Thomas Wood, only son of Sutton T. Wood, Esq. of Hall Barn, near Beaconsfield, going too near a threshing machine, received a blow on the head from one of the flails, which fracturing his skull, caused his death on the Saturday following, greatly to the regret of his family and numerous acquaintance.

On Saturday last an inquisition was taken at Enstone, before Richard D. Gough, one of the Coroners for this county, on view of the body of William Leonard Mason, who had been digging a well opposite to the turnpike gate, in the said parish, and going down his foot unfortunately slipped, when he fell to the bottom, (nearly thirty feet) and received so violent a contusion on his forehead, that he languished for one hour only.—Verdict, Accidental Death.

Tuesday fortnight Thomas Cassidy, a licensed Hawker, was convicted before the Bailiff of the Borough and Parish of Buckingham in four several penalties of ten pounds each, (which were afterwards mitigated to one) for dispersing of hand bills, and thereby vending linen drapery and other goods contrary to the directions of the Act of Parliament.
