KING'S BENCH. SATURDAY, November 22.

An Application was made to fet afide a verdict obtained against the Sheriff of Middlefex, by a creditor of Lord William Murray. His Lordship had been arrested, and carried to a spunging house. Lady Mirray residing with her husband there, was brought to bed. During the period of her lying-in, the Wirt taken out against her husband was returnable. It was renewed, however, by the humanity of the Sheriff's Officer, and his Lordship was still permitted to remain in the spunging house.

After the renewal of the writ Lord William Murray was called by urgent business to the Cockpit, Whitehall, in order to affilt in the decision of some affairs relaive to himself. The Sheriff's Officer, admit how wards his Lordship with the same humanity, permitted him to leave his place of confinement, and accompanied him to the Cockpit; on their way thither, they were seen by one of his officers had permitted an estage of the state of his officers had permitted an estage. The cost, however, were very expensive.

The Cortt determined that the case had no precedent. There was therefore no positive law against the conduct adopted by the Sheriff's Officer. The writ issue against his Lordship, required that his body should be produced before the King, or his justices at Westmitter.
