100 IN the focoad reading of this Bill, the East of Seglist Rads, he could not give his ament to fo large a from being fact on that head.

Lord Greenille thought the preferr fituation of Ireland was to thought the properly of religious to leave a doubt of the propriety of religious at the law of a money in this country for its defend a fund which was to be depended in the properly of religious and which was to be dispoted of under the direction of the Parliament of Ireland.

The Bill was then read a fecond time, and ordered to be committed.

Mr. Praya professed. 311 fc.

Lead Grenville fasted his firm conviction, that all difcussion—of the prefeat fulpiech was highly improper. He little expected to hear "i fides of the House" mentioned upon fuch an occasion as the prefeat; he thought they were all agreed upon the question. They had better afford no more ground for mirreprefentation, by perfitting in the diffcussion with the state of the provide diffcussion with the deprecate the conduct of Ministers in thus delay ring to come to Parliament. What palled that night could not be centured as diffcussion; it is and a support of the provide difficustion with the state of the state ratie grounds, and condemned the conduct of Minifiers in unqualified terms.

Lord Greenille flaid, he would leave it to the Houte to decide upon the inflance of a Peer making an unfounded and declamatory attack upon a perfon who had previoufly announced his determination not to aniver him.

The Lord Chanceller quirted the Woolfack, and observed, that, taking it on the ground of Peers, on the other fide of the Houfe, no delay fhould be given to the paffing of the Bill. He must deprecate all diffcuffion as of injurious tendency—He thought it idle to refer to what had already paffed. They were now in poffelion of the Bill. He would appeal to the understanding of all prefent, if the precious moment was to be loft in unavailing dispute.

The Bill was then read a fecond time, the committent of it negatived, and then read a third time and paffed. The Houfe then waited for fome time, for the arrival of the Committion to authorize certain Peers to give his Majethy's Affent to the Seamen's increased Pay Bill, and to other Bills. On the Committion being brought down, the Houle of Commons were fent for, and his Majethy's Royal Affent was given to the Bill for increasing the Payand certain Allowances to the Seamen, and to eight private Bills.—Adjourned.

THE SEAMEN.

THE SEAMEN.

Mr. Whistered faid, in confequence of what happened yefterday, on a fubject which arrefled the attention of every individual, he confidered it his dauy to prefs the Minifler for an antwer to a question put by two friends of his, to which no reply had been made, namely, why he did not, at an earlier period, propofe the Refolution he fubmitted to the House yesterday, which was unanimously adopted, and which, if prefented fooner, would probably have prevented the most distance, the state of the state for frequently mitinderficol even in that Houfe! He had frequently prefiled for information with the particulars of the negotiation. The Houfe knew nothing of the particulars of the negotiation. The dilance of Portfineuth had, on a former occasion, been mentioned as an excuse for the delay, and the Houfe had been fulled, into a belief that the Mutiny had fince been completely supperfield. In the whole of this proceedings, there were furth evident marks of conficious guist, as, he trusted, would induce the Houfe to consure the conduct of Administration. The Minister affected to learnest the confidence that had arisen from his delay; but could be flate any individual act of his Ministry, which had not afforded to his country a subject of lamentation. More lives, it was now underflood, had been lost, and many high in professional character, for whose ferviess their country were deeply indebted, were at his moment in a situation of the utmost period. Under sinch irruntances, it became the bounden duty of the Houfe to stamp.

Mr. Sheridan began by reprobating the conduct of Ministers for delaying the confideration of the feamen's claims to make way for the Imperial Loan, the Princess Royal's Portion, &c. of lefs importance to the true interest of the country. J'aless the Minister had been completely beforted, it was impossible for him not to have apprehended new jealousites and discontents from his facadious procraftination. The nature of the discontents were unknown to the House; but if there were men in the fleet who whed to facrifice. the Constitution, they were the baffer traitors on earth, and he could not perfunde himself that British failors, who ought to be actuated by mobiler fentiments, would of their actuated by mobiler fentiments, would not not called himself that British failors, who ought to be actuated by a bed for the country were involved. Some interest of their country were involved. Some interest of their country were involved. Some interest of their country were wholly imputable to the missionduct of Administration. It was reprehensible in a Minister to fay, "I' Truit to me, I am at the helm, I'll take care to fleer clear of the rocks and floals in which I have involved the Veffel of the State;" and yet their conduct fermed to realifie thich declarations. He concluded by proposing a Committee to meet the other House new, with a view to a joint Committee empowered to fend for persons, papers, and records, and likewise to be at liberty to adjourn from time to time, and from place to place.

Mr. Pir faids, the question he withed to bring before the House was of infinitely more importance than the proposition of the State, who were wounded to flate, that when Ministers became in cause is a state of the continuence of the country. He concluded by moving, that a mef-fage be fart to the Lords, defing them to continue their littings for form time.

Mr. Park faid, when Ministers beca

The Chanzellar of the Enchequer felt fome decrees of difficulty in taking notice of the Honzellar up than might be transferred from him to my blane might be transferred from him to my other perfor; but he thought it necessary to the thought it necessary there to prefer any effinance, or to give directions for them to be made out. was pretented to his Majerly in Council, which was referred to a Committee, whole report on the faine was approved of by the Council on the next day, it being that day when the Council ordinarily met. On Thurfday laft he had given notice to the House that the ellimate would be prefented on the following day, which was prevented from being done until Monday. At the time then when the effimate was prefented, and at lift the periods of intermediate explanation, at all the periods of intermediate explanation, that is inconteffiable evidence of its having been than a inconteffiable evidence of its having been than a inconteffiable evidence of its having been than a inconteffiable evidence and the work of the transport of the department that had been made to the featmen of the fispeding that there was any infineerity on their hopping that there was any infineerity on their thought it would be fair to observe, that they must have been also in a great degree produced by the mijergregionations of disenting that had taken place in another House, which it was not consider with the orders of Parliament for him to name. As to the fineerity of the intention of his Majethy's Minifers, he could fearedly condesioned to make a reply to those who should express a doubt about it. The greatest enemies of Government could not for one moment suppose that any voluntary delay had taken place on the part of Ministers. With

LONDON, May 11.

We are hapy to announce, that, if the diff-contents in the fleet be not already fettled, there is every each of the flore that the next accounts will bring; a condition of this defirable event having taken place. The flore that the next accounts will bring; a condition of the fleet that the content of the fleet that the proceedings of Parliament laft night, and the proceedings of Parliament laft night that the proceedings of Parliament laft night end to the the proceedings of Parliament laft night end to the reached them, there cannot be a doubt but they will immediately and cheerfully return to their different proceedings of Parliament laft night end to the proceedings of Parliament was, that the Bill for granting the different allowances promifed the feamen paffed both House with great hale, was fent to Buckingham. boufe, where it received his Majefly's fignature, after which it was ratified by Commifion.

The Ministry then adjourned to the Admiralty, where they held a Council, at which the Lord Chancellor, Duke of Portland, Earls of Speacer, Liverpool, and Howe, and Mr. Pitt, and Mr. Dundas were prefent. About twelve o'clock, when the adjournment took place, a Mellenger was dispatched with the proceedings of Parliament in Invour of the Sailors, and instructions to Lord Bridport. Similar notices have also been transmitted to Plymouth, Torbay, Yarmouth, Palmouth, &c. &c.

There is no realon to believe that the Breft feet is yet at fea; though according to very recent advices, it was in a very forward flate of preparation, and of considerable force.
