LONDUN, July 9.

The accounts by the mails have for fome time paft informed us of the active preparations carrying on againt this country on the French and Flemith coaft. The fame policy that dictates to the military powers the keeping their armies on full war etlablithment, may have induced France to make thefe demontrations upon her coaft. She may think that they will enable her to negociate with mone effect. The negociation between the two Governments is known to have been carried on with great activity for fome months paft. In that time, furely, many prominent parts must have been discussed in the conceded. The negociation would long fince have broken off, if the obfacles to peace had been fuch as not to be removed.
