That the ROYAL CIRCUS, St. Genige's fields, should prove the favourite resert is by to means surprising, when we consider the excellence of its productions—The Fire King, or Miner and Royaling is the admiration of every circle; and that it would be the coverflowing audience of each evening, amongst whom the boxes constantly display large parties of the nobility, and persons of the first distinction, it sufficient evidence—their universal plandits attend this truly splendid and admirable Prece, and which are consinued through the excellent Pantomine of The British in Egypt. We fird, however, that this is the last week but one of the precent Performances, and a new splendid consistency of the produced.
