TO THE PRINTER OF THE OXFORD JOURNAL. A Caution to the Public against Unlawful and Swindlers.

As a caution to the unwary, and to atone in some measure for my own folly, in suffering myself to be the dupe of such notorious swindlers, I transmit for insertion in your paper the following account of a swindler who has been detected in his crime.

"Happening to be one of the unsuspecting bystanders the other evening at this gentleman's exhibition at the Magpies, near this town, and seeing amongst a number of the tickets a handsome one, and which was marked with a prize to be drawn for that evening, I was tempted to venture my filling, and observed the tickets as they were put into the hat, among which I saw the name of the swindler, and I immediately wrote on it, and then returned to the company by Mr. Andrew, repeating at the same time, that the fortunate drawer of that ticket would have the choice of that prize, which was a handsome one, and which was marked with a prize to be drawn for that evening.

As I have written on each of the other cards, and I am only desirous that this information may operate to prevent the noble gentlemen being successful in their attempts to pilfer the same community in their very humble venture.

W. S. P. Since writing the above, I am happy to hear, to the honour of the Berkshire Magistrates, that one of the above gentlemen is lodged in the County Bridewell.
