importance. It affords, however, an excellent opportunity for a panegyric upon the wonderful facility of the French character, who allowed 4000 infantry, and a regiment of Aufrian cavalry, to pass through their advanced posts, merely because there was a report of a suspension of arms. The next Rulleria to recommend the suspension of the passing the suspension of the sus

The next Bulletin is more important, but it is far from being clear. Murat and Lafnes are fiated to have come up, on the 15th ult. with the Ruffians, at Holbrunn or Hollabrunn, about fined to have come up, or the 13th ultimative Residuats, at Holbrum or Hollabrum, about the Russians, at Holbrum or Hollabrum, about they mise from Vicina, on the road to Prague. As fair fight from Vicina, on the road to Prague. As fair fight for the Austrian trops to Ceparae themselves from the Russians. This, as a matrice of course, was granted. But this pertitionary spirit was not conheed to the Austrians alone. Baron Winzingerode next preferred his request, and effected to capitulate for the subside Russian map? Murat was included to accept to the time the proper of the time terms. The reasons adigned for the Emperor's differt are curious; he could not accede to it, "but the French Emperor could not bring himself to approve the terms. The reasons adigned for the Emperor's differt are curious; he could not accede to it, "because the capitulation was a kind of Treaty, and it did not appear that M. Winzingconde had any authority from the Emperor of Russia." The Articles of the Capitulation proposed by the Russians are annexed to this Eusletin, and appear to have been regularly figured. The Russian army conferts to quit Germany by the road they entered it. What more could Buomaparte defire, unless he was almost certain of taking the whole army? From what took place on the next day, the ardiour of his expectation in that respect must have been considerably diminished.

An action was fought on the next day, the rosal of the property of the property of the Russians.

his expectation in that refpect must have been confiderably diminified. An action was fought on the next day, the foli, between the rear guard of the Rullams and the French, in which the afth Bulletin and the French, in which the afth Bulletin and the French, in which the afth Bulletin and the French, in which the after the former to have been deteated, with the lofs of 2000 killed, and twelve pieces of cannon, and 2000 men taken. The hoffile armies frequently came to the bayonet, and formed battailium of Rullian grenaders are admitted to have flewn bravery." General Oudinot, and his two Aldea-de-Camp, were wounded on the part of the Prench. The Rufflans retired towards Brung; the Funperor fixed his head quarters at Zunium on the 17th, and continued there the next day. Why? The reafon is the moft extraordinary ever advanced; 4 because he had been a proof of his respect to the reach.

Some Dutch papers, and letters to the ath inflant, were received yefterday—An article, dated Amferdam, the spot util. flantes, that a Rufflan division had, after a fewere action, been obliged to capitulate in the neighbourhood of Prefourg. Letters of the 3d infl. however, for far from confirming this flatement, fay, that there was nothing new from the armies. The fame letters add: "The failures at Paris are of great magnitude; there are rumours here of fresh floppages; these vents laue already had very ferious, effects, which are likely to be attended with fatal confequences to many houses in Amilterdam, fuch particularly whose concetion are principally with French houses."

The letters above alluded to, give directions to the house to which they are addressed, to fell considerable sums out of the English Funds. Many of the eletters contain similar directions, and the Stocks, in confequence, in the early ant of yesterday, experienced a depression of nearly one per cent, but at the close of the day they recovered, and left off at the price at we have a summary of the sum of
