

Want Places.

A COOK, or House-Maid, in a small Family; a young Person who can work well at her needle, and have a good character, to prefer to her, will be paid to S. M. at Mr. Slingby's, No. 2, Castle-street, Liverpool.

A HOUSE-MAID in a Family, or in a small Family, where there is only one servant kept, a steady young Woman.

Direct (post paid) to G. L. at No. 27, Cheyne Walk, Chelsea.

A HOUSE-MAID, a young Woman, who can work well at her needle. Can have a good character from her late place.

Direct (post paid) to A. B. at No. 18, Chalcots-green, Sommers Town.

A SERVANT, a Man who can make himself useful in any situation, speaks few languages, and has travelled most of the world, by sea and land. No objection to act as Porter, to carry out small parcels. Can have a good recommendation.

Direct (post paid) to R. S. at Mr. Lovelace's, No. 1, Robert-street, Blackfriars-Road.

WANTS a Situation, as Weekly Man in a Ware-house, Shop, or any Concern who can be found useful in a ready, active young Man, who writes a good hand. No objection to act as Porter, to carry out small parcels. Can have a good recommendation.

Letters addressed (post paid) to W. B. at Mr. Lee's, Butcher,

No. 2, St. Martin's-lane, Lombard-street, will be immediately attended to.

TO be Let, on reasonable terms a neat alcove Bed-room, furnished, in a quiet family, and airy situation. It would suit a young man of respectability in a Public Office.

The address may be had at No. 7, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH, with enamel, skilfully placed, from one to a whole set, to fit every mouth, and to be removed when wanted. Human Teeth placed to stumps, etc. placed to fit every mouth. Mr. Prince, Dentist, No. 333, Oxford-street, performs every operation on the Teeth and Gums in the fairest manner.

Prince's Particulars for concealing decayed Teeth in front, so that they do not appear when decayed, place half a guinea per pair.

Prince's Grafting Tinthe, which has been proved as the only article yet discovered for retaining teeth that are loose, half a guinea per tooth.

Prince's Cherry Paste for preserving and whitening the teeth, curing the Decay in the gums, 2s. 6d. per ounce.

Prince's Cherry Liquor, a powerful excellence, consists in pieces of dried cherries, which may be used in配合 with any other fruit, or dried fruits, 7s. per bottle.

Prince's Mouthwash for the tooth-ache, which gives immediate relief.

To be had by the Proprietor, No. 150, Oxford-street, and by Mr. Abbott, No. 150, Allen, No. 76, Ganton-street, No. 2, Wigmore-street, No. 155, Cheapside, No. 229, Strand, Ward, No. 324, Newgate-street, and Royal Exchange, No. 10, Cornhill, Dublin; Racham, North Bridge, Belfast; No. 1, Shepherd, Britton; Cutwell, Bath; Blanckford, York; St. Paul, Cheltenham.

Any orders from any part of the country will be sent by coach, by post, or by letter, directed to Mr. Prince, No. 333, Oxford-street, London.

A DVICE.—When regular Surgeons acknowledge their infirmities, and publicly offer their advice, and state the professional abilities for the care of a few reclining patients, they are inferior to that portion of the medical profession which are the attendants of the sick, and wholly unacquainted with the practice of physic.—Mr. CURRIE, Surgeon, formerly in his Majesty's service, comes with unabated ardour, to eradicate every species of personal infirmity.

By applying on the first appearance of disease, a perfect cure is generally obtained within a short period of two days; and in the most complicated nature, when the practitioner has failed of success, the patient may rely on receiving a life, certain, and radical re-establishment.

He has equally succeeded in the removal of the symptoms of rheumatism, and has entirely relieved many a hardy, and most unhappy person by the youth of both sexes.

In the one it will be found the following formulae.

Mr. ASHWELL, at No. 7, Weymouth-street, Portland-place, THIS DAY, October 11, at Twelve o'clock, will give immediate relief.

ALL the genuine HOUSEHOLD FURNITURE, comprising a large quantity of well-manufactured Household Furniture, a Sideboard of wicet Plate, Wardrobe of Table and Linen, large brilliant Plate and Chimney-piece, various Mirrors of large dimensions, few Carter's Boxes, in good preservation and furniture, large and small, and other Carter's of various descriptions, a complete Drawing-room Suit, China, Glass, &c.

Mr. ASHWELL, at No. 7, Weymouth-street, Portland-place, THIS DAY, October 11, at Twelve o'clock, will give immediate relief.

THE LEASE of a convenient Family House, in excellent repair, well adapted for any retail trade requiring a shop, and a public situation; it held for a long term, at a moderate rent.

To be viewed, particulars may be had on the premises; or by post, or by letter, to the lessor to be had.

Strand.—A Picturesque House, Lancashire, No. 27, by Messrs. SCOTT and HOLT, at Garraway's, on Wednesday, the 15th instant, at Two o'clock.

THE LEASE of a convenient House, and Shop, in excellent repair, well adapted for any retail trade requiring a shop, and a public situation; it held for a long term, at a moderate rent.

To be viewed, particulars may be had on the premises; or by post, or by letter, to the lessor to be had.

TO MY CORRESPONDENTS.

THESE extended Reputation, which was the first object of my ambition in the treatment of Venereal Complaints in and Deafness, having attracted the notice of Correspondents in the United Kingdom of Great Britain, and from different parts of Europe and America, I beg to address this public notice to such individuals.

The occupation of my time in answering letters from those who greatly need relief, and thereby affording for me, some very valuable information, that no letters could be omitted without regret. I again repeat the intention of my writing letters without infidelity, to be answered, unless from Patients already under my care, or to those who have given me the confidence of their names, and from Foreign Countries, and in every particular, I will be equally frank, with the greatest freedom, and will be guided by either sex, with the greatest secrecy, and will keep their names secret, if not agreed to the contrary.

Mr. CURRIE, Surgeon, formerly in his Majesty's service, and now residing in his house, No. 107, Hatton-garden, London, will be daily answered, and will be guided by either sex, and by the best advice and medicines given or sent to any part of the kingdom.

MARTIN BREE, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons in London.

Arundel-street, Oct. 11, 1806.

IN PROFESSING MYSELF regularly educated Member of the College of Surgeons in London, I think it sufficient to figure, that my Diploma from the University, as well as Certificates from the various Professors under whom I have had my Surgery, and Midwifery, have been sent to every one of my patients, open to the inspection of every Person who happens to be there, or is desirous of such examination.

THREE YEARS I have refined all other Practice for the study and practice of VENERAL COMPLAINTS and DEAFNESS, having attracted the notice of Correspondents in the United Kingdom of Great Britain, and from different parts of Europe and America, I beg to address this public notice to such individuals.

The occupation of my time in answering letters from those who greatly need relief, and thereby affording for me, some very valuable information, that no letters could be omitted without regret. I again repeat the intention of my writing letters without infidelity, to be answered, unless from Patients already under my care, or to those who have given me the confidence of their names, and from Foreign Countries, and in every particular, I will be equally frank, with the greatest freedom, and will be guided by either sex, with the greatest secrecy, and will keep their names secret, if not agreed to the contrary.

Mr. CURRIE, Surgeon, formerly in his Majesty's service, and now residing in his house, No. 107, Hatton-garden, London, will be daily answered, and will be guided by either sex, and by the best advice and medicines given or sent to any part of the kingdom.

MARTIN BREE, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons in London.

Arundel-street, Oct. 11, 1806.

IN PROFESSING MYSELF regularly educated Member of the College of Surgeons in London, I think it sufficient to figure, that my Diploma from the University, as well as Certificates from the various Professors under whom I have had my Surgery, and Midwifery, have been sent to every one of my patients, open to the inspection of every Person who happens to be there, or is desirous of such examination.

THREE YEARS I have refined all other Practice for the study and practice of VENERAL COMPLAINTS and DEAFNESS, having attracted the notice of Correspondents in the United Kingdom of Great Britain, and from different parts of Europe and America, I beg to address this public notice to such individuals.

The occupation of my time in answering letters from those who greatly need relief, and thereby affording for me, some very valuable information, that no letters could be omitted without regret. I again repeat the intention of my writing letters without infidelity, to be answered, unless from Patients already under my care, or to those who have given me the confidence of their names, and from Foreign Countries, and in every particular, I will be equally frank, with the greatest freedom, and will be guided by either sex, with the greatest secrecy, and will keep their names secret, if not agreed to the contrary.

Mr. CURRIE, Surgeon, formerly in his Majesty's service, and now residing in his house, No. 107, Hatton-garden, London, will be daily answered, and will be guided by either sex, and by the best advice and medicines given or sent to any part of the kingdom.

MARTIN BREE, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons in London.

Arundel-street, Oct. 11, 1806.

IN PROFESSING MYSELF regularly educated Member of the College of Surgeons in London, I think it sufficient to figure, that my Diploma from the University, as well as Certificates from the various Professors under whom I have had my Surgery, and Midwifery, have been sent to every one of my patients, open to the inspection of every Person who happens to be there, or is desirous of such examination.

THREE YEARS I have refined all other Practice for the study and practice of VENERAL COMPLAINTS and DEAFNESS, having attracted the notice of Correspondents in the United Kingdom of Great Britain, and from different parts of Europe and America, I beg to address this public notice to such individuals.

The occupation of my time in answering letters from those who greatly need relief, and thereby affording for me, some very valuable information, that no letters could be omitted without regret. I again repeat the intention of my writing letters without infidelity, to be answered, unless from Patients already under my care, or to those who have given me the confidence of their names, and from Foreign Countries, and in every particular, I will be equally frank, with the greatest freedom, and will be guided by either sex, with the greatest secrecy, and will keep their names secret, if not agreed to the contrary.

Mr. CURRIE, Surgeon, formerly in his Majesty's service, and now residing in his house, No. 107, Hatton-garden, London, will be daily answered, and will be guided by either sex, and by the best advice and medicines given or sent to any part of the kingdom.

MARTIN BREE, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons in London.

Arundel-street, Oct. 11, 1806.

IN PROFESSING MYSELF regularly educated Member of the College of Surgeons in London, I think it sufficient to figure, that my Diploma from the University, as well as Certificates from the various Professors under whom I have had my Surgery, and Midwifery, have been sent to every one of my patients, open to the inspection of every Person who happens to be there, or is desirous of such examination.

THREE YEARS I have refined all other Practice for the study and practice of VENERAL COMPLAINTS and DEAFNESS, having attracted the notice of Correspondents in the United Kingdom of Great Britain, and from different parts of Europe and America, I beg to address this public notice to such individuals.

The occupation of my time in answering letters from those who greatly need relief, and thereby affording for me, some very valuable information, that no letters could be omitted without regret. I again repeat the intention of my writing letters without infidelity, to be answered, unless from Patients already under my care, or to those who have given me the confidence of their names, and from Foreign Countries, and in every particular, I will be equally frank, with the greatest freedom, and will be guided by either sex, with the greatest secrecy, and will keep their names secret, if not agreed to the contrary.

Mr. CURRIE, Surgeon, formerly in his Majesty's service, and now residing in his house, No. 107, Hatton-garden, London, will be daily answered, and will be guided by either sex, and by the best advice and medicines given or sent to any part of the kingdom.

MARTIN BREE, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons in London.

Arundel-street, Oct. 11, 1806.

IN PROFESSING MYSELF regularly educated Member of the College of Surgeons in London, I think it sufficient to figure, that my Diploma from the University, as well as Certificates from the various Professors under whom I have had my Surgery, and Midwifery, have been sent to every one of my patients, open to the inspection of every Person who happens to be there, or is desirous of such examination.

THREE YEARS I have refined all other Practice for the study and practice of VENERAL COMPLAINTS and DEAFNESS, having attracted the notice of Correspondents in the United Kingdom of Great Britain, and from different parts of Europe and America, I beg to address this public notice to such individuals.

The occupation of my time in answering letters from those who greatly need relief, and thereby affording for me, some very valuable information, that no letters could be omitted without regret. I again repeat the intention of my writing letters without infidelity, to be answered, unless from Patients already under my care, or to those who have given me the confidence of their names, and from Foreign Countries, and in every particular, I will be equally frank, with the greatest freedom, and will be guided by either sex, with the greatest secrecy, and will keep their names secret, if not agreed to the contrary.

Mr. CURRIE, Surgeon, formerly in his Majesty's service, and now residing in his house, No. 107, Hatton-garden, London, will be daily answered, and will be guided by either sex, and by the best advice and medicines given or sent to any part of the kingdom.

MARTIN BREE, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons in London.

Arundel-street, Oct. 11, 1806.

IN PROFESSING MYSELF regularly educated Member of the College of Surgeons in London, I think it sufficient to figure, that my Diploma from the University, as well as Certificates from the various Professors under whom I have had my Surgery, and Midwifery, have been sent to every one of my patients, open to the inspection of every Person who happens to be there, or is desirous of such examination.

THREE YEARS I have refined all other Practice for the study and practice of VENERAL COMPLAINTS and DEAFNESS, having attracted the notice of Correspondents in the United Kingdom of Great Britain, and from different parts of Europe and America, I beg to address this public notice to such individuals.

The occupation of my time in answering letters from those who greatly need relief, and thereby affording for me, some very valuable information, that no letters could be omitted without regret. I again repeat the intention of my writing letters without infidelity, to be answered, unless from Patients already under my care, or to those who have given me the confidence of their names, and from Foreign Countries, and in every particular, I will be equally frank, with the greatest freedom, and will be guided by either sex, with the greatest secrecy, and will keep their names secret, if not agreed to the contrary.

Mr. CURRIE, Surgeon, formerly in his Majesty's service, and now residing in his house, No. 107, Hatton-garden, London, will be daily answered, and will be guided by either sex, and by the best advice and medicines given or sent to any part of the kingdom.

MARTIN BREE, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons in London.

Arundel-street, Oct. 11, 1806.

IN PROFESSING MYSELF regularly educated Member of the College of Surgeons in London, I think it sufficient to figure, that my Diploma from the University, as well as Certificates from the various Professors under whom I have had my Surgery, and Midwifery, have been sent to every one of my patients, open to the inspection of every Person who happens to be there, or is desirous of such examination.

THREE YEARS I have refined all other Practice for the study and practice of VENERAL COMPLAINTS and DEAFNESS, having attracted the notice of Correspondents in the United Kingdom of Great Britain, and from different parts of Europe and America, I beg to address this public notice to such individuals.

The occupation of my time in answering letters from those who greatly need relief, and thereby affording for me, some very valuable information, that no letters could be omitted without regret. I again repeat the intention of my writing letters without infidelity, to be answered, unless from Patients already under my care, or to those who have given me the confidence of their names, and from Foreign Countries, and in every particular, I will be equally frank, with the greatest freedom, and will be guided by either sex, with the greatest secrecy, and will keep their names secret, if not agreed to the contrary.

Mr. CURRIE, Surgeon, formerly in his Majesty's service, and now residing in his house, No. 107, Hatton-garden, London, will be daily answered, and will be guided by either sex, and by the best advice and medicines given or sent to any part of the kingdom.

MARTIN BREE, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons in London.

Arundel-street, Oct. 11, 1806.

IN PROFESSING MYSELF regularly educated Member of the College of Surgeons in London, I think it sufficient to figure, that my Diploma from the University, as well as Certificates from the various Professors under whom I have had my Surgery, and Midwifery, have been sent to every one of my patients, open to the inspection of every Person who happens to be there, or is desirous of such examination.

THREE YEARS I have refined all other Practice for the study and practice of VENERAL COMPLAINTS and DEAFNESS, having attracted the notice of Correspondents in the United Kingdom of Great Britain, and from different parts of Europe and America, I beg to address this public notice to such individuals.

The occupation of my time in answering letters from those who greatly need relief, and thereby affording for me, some very valuable information, that no letters could be omitted without regret. I again repeat the intention of my writing letters without infidelity, to be answered, unless from Patients already under my care, or to those who have given me the confidence of their names, and from Foreign Countries, and in every particular, I will be equally frank, with the greatest freedom, and will be guided by either sex, with the greatest secrecy, and will keep their names secret, if not agreed to the contrary.

Mr. CURRIE, Surgeon, formerly in his Majesty's service, and now residing in his house, No. 107, Hatton-garden, London, will be daily answered, and will be guided by either sex, and by the best advice and medicines given or sent to any part of the kingdom.

MARTIN BREE, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons in London.

Arundel-street, Oct. 11, 1806.

IN PROFESSING MYSELF regularly educated Member of the College of Surgeons in London, I think it sufficient to figure, that my Diploma from the University, as well as Certificates from the various Professors under whom I have had my Surgery, and Midwifery, have been sent to every one of my patients, open to the inspection of every Person who happens to be there, or is desirous of such examination.

THREE YEARS I have refined all other Practice for the study and practice of VENERAL COMPLAINTS and DEAFNESS, having attracted the notice of Correspondents in the United Kingdom of Great Britain, and from different parts of Europe and America, I beg to address this public notice to such individuals.

The occupation of my time in answering letters from those who greatly need relief, and thereby affording for me, some very valuable information, that no letters could be omitted without regret. I again repeat the intention of my writing letters without infidelity, to be answered, unless from Patients already under my care, or to those who have given me the confidence of their names, and from Foreign Countries, and in every particular, I will be equally frank, with the greatest freedom, and will be guided by either sex, with the greatest secrecy, and will keep their names secret, if not agreed to the contrary.

Mr. CURRIE, Surgeon, formerly in his Majesty's service, and now residing in his house, No. 107, Hatton-garden, London, will be daily answered, and will be guided by either sex, and by the best advice and medicines given or sent to any part of the kingdom.

MARTIN BREE, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons in London.

Arundel-street, Oct. 11, 1806.

IN PROFESSING MYSELF regularly educated Member of the College of Surgeons in London, I think it sufficient to figure, that my Diploma from the University, as well as Certificates from the various Professors under whom I have had my Surgery, and Midwifery, have been sent to every one of my patients, open to the inspection of every Person who happens to be there, or is desirous of such examination.

THREE YEARS I have refined all other Practice for the study and practice of VENERAL COMPLAINTS and DEAFNESS, having attracted the notice of Correspondents in the United Kingdom of Great Britain, and from different parts of Europe and America, I beg to address this public notice to such individuals.

The occupation of my time in answering letters from those who greatly need relief, and thereby affording for me, some very valuable information, that no letters could be omitted without regret. I again repeat the intention of my writing letters without infidelity, to be answered, unless from Patients already under my care, or to those who have given me the confidence of their names, and from Foreign Countries, and in every particular, I will be equally frank, with the greatest freedom, and will be guided by either sex, with the greatest secrecy, and will keep their names secret, if not agreed to the contrary.

Mr. CURRIE, Surgeon, formerly in his Majesty's service, and now residing in his house, No. 107, Hatton-garden, London, will be daily answered, and will be guided by either sex, and by the best advice and medicines given or sent to any part of the kingdom.

MARTIN BREE, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons in London.

Arundel-street, Oct. 11, 1806.

IN PROFESSING MYSELF regularly educated Member of the College of Surgeons in London, I think it sufficient to figure, that my Diploma from the University, as well as Certificates from the various Professors under whom I have had my Surgery, and Midwifery, have been sent to every one of my patients, open to the inspection of every Person who happens to be there, or is desirous of such examination.

THREE YEARS I have refined all other Practice for the study and practice of VENERAL COMPLAINTS and DEAFNESS, having attracted the notice of Correspondents in the United Kingdom of Great Britain, and from different parts of Europe and America, I beg to address this public notice to such individuals.

The occupation of my time in answering letters from those who greatly need relief, and thereby affording for me, some very valuable information, that no letters could be omitted without regret. I again repeat the intention of my writing letters without infidelity, to be answered, unless from Patients already under my care, or to those who have given me the confidence of their names, and from Foreign Countries, and in every particular, I will be equally frank, with the greatest freedom, and will be guided by either sex, with the greatest secrecy, and will keep their names secret, if not agreed to the contrary.

Mr. CURRIE, Surgeon, formerly in his Majesty's service, and now residing in his house, No. 107, Hatton-garden, London, will be daily answered, and will be guided by either sex, and by the best advice and medicines given or sent to any part of the kingdom.

MARTIN BREE, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons in London.

Arundel-street, Oct. 11, 1806.

IN PROFESSING MYSELF regularly educated Member of the College of Surgeons in London, I think it sufficient to figure, that my Diploma from the University, as well as Certificates from the various Professors under whom I have had my Surgery, and Midwifery, have been sent to every one of my patients, open to the inspection of every Person who happens to be there, or is desirous of such examination.

THREE YEARS I have refined all other Practice for the study and practice of VENERAL COMPLAINTS and DEAFNESS, having attracted the notice of Correspondents in the United Kingdom of Great Britain, and from different parts of Europe and America, I beg to address this public notice to such individuals.

The occupation of my time in answering letters from those who greatly need relief, and thereby affording for me, some very valuable information, that no letters could be omitted without regret. I again repeat the intention of my writing letters without infidelity, to be answered, unless from Patients already under my care, or to those who have given me the confidence of their names, and from Foreign Countries, and in every particular, I will be equally frank, with the greatest freedom, and will be guided by either sex, with the greatest secrecy, and will keep their names secret, if not agreed to the contrary.

Mr. CURRIE, Surgeon, formerly in his Majesty's service, and now residing in his house, No. 107, Hatton-garden, London, will be daily answered, and will be guided by either sex, and by the best advice and medicines given or sent to any part of the kingdom.

MARTIN BREE, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons in London.

Arundel-street, Oct. 11, 1806.

IN PROFESSING MYSELF regularly educated Member of the College of Surgeons in London, I think it sufficient to figure, that my Diploma from the University, as well as Certificates from the various Professors under whom I have had my Surgery, and Midwifery, have been sent to every one of my patients, open to the inspection of every Person who happens to be there, or is desirous of such examination.

THREE YEARS I have refined all other Practice for the study and practice of VENERAL COMPLAINTS and DEAFNESS, having attracted the notice of Correspondents in the United Kingdom of Great Britain, and from different parts of Europe and America, I beg to address this public notice to such individuals.

The occupation of my time in answering letters from those who greatly need relief, and thereby affording for me, some very valuable information, that no letters could be omitted without regret. I again repeat the intention of my writing letters without infidelity, to be answered, unless from Patients already under my care, or to those who have given me the confidence of their names, and from Foreign Countries, and in every particular, I will be equally frank, with the greatest freedom, and will be guided by either sex, with the greatest secrecy, and will keep their names secret, if not agreed to the contrary.

Mr. CURRIE, Surgeon, formerly in his Majesty's service, and now residing in his house, No. 107, Hatton-garden, London, will be daily answered, and will be guided by either sex, and by the best advice and medicines given or sent to any part of the kingdom.

MARTIN BREE, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons in London.

Arundel-street, Oct. 11, 1806.

IN PROFESSING MYSELF regularly educated Member of the College of Surgeons in London, I think it sufficient to figure, that my Diploma from the University, as well as Certificates from the various Professors under whom I have had my Surgery, and Midwifery, have been sent to every one of my patients, open to the inspection of every Person who happens to be there, or is desirous of such examination.

THREE YEARS I have refined all other Practice for the study and practice of VENERAL COMPLAINTS and DEAFNESS, having attracted the notice of Correspondents in the United Kingdom of Great Britain, and from different parts of Europe and America, I beg to address this public notice to such individuals.

The occupation of my time in answering letters from those who greatly need relief, and thereby affording for me, some very valuable information, that no letters could be omitted without regret. I again repeat the intention of my writing letters without infidelity, to be answered, unless from Patients already under my care, or to those who have given me the confidence of their names, and from Foreign Countries, and in every particular, I will be equally frank, with the greatest freedom, and will be guided by either sex, with the greatest secrecy, and will keep their names secret, if not agreed to the contrary.

Mr. CURRIE, Surgeon, formerly in his Majesty's service, and now residing in his house, No. 107, Hatton-garden, London, will be daily answered, and will be guided by either sex, and by the best advice and medicines given or sent to any part of the kingdom.

MARTIN BREE, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons in London.

Arundel-street, Oct. 11, 1806.

IN PROFESSING MYSELF regularly educated Member of the College of Surgeons in London, I think it sufficient to figure, that my Diploma from the University, as well as Certificates from the various Professors under whom I have had my Surgery, and Midwifery, have been sent to every one of my patients, open to the inspection of every Person who happens to be there, or is desirous of such examination.

THREE YEARS I have refined all other Practice for the study and practice of VENERAL COMPLAINTS and DEAFNESS, having attracted the notice of Correspondents in the United Kingdom of Great Britain, and from different parts of Europe and America, I beg to address this public notice to such individuals.

The occupation