SATURDAY'S POST. BY EXPRESS.

LONDON, JUNE 30.

In the laft Foreign papers the articles moft worthy of attention are those which relate to the taking of Dredden, the positions of the French Empire. It is important in two mays for the dual means of the Papal territories to the French Empire. It is important in two mays for the Austrians to have got possition of the capital of Saxony: It has given them the command of a country rich in grain, and from which they may draw exhaustless stores of provisions for their army; and by enlarging the sphere of their protecting force, they hold out encouragement to those who are well allected to their cause distinctive to ronounce in their favour, and erect a standard around which insurgents from all quarters may rally. From the statement given of the position of the French army, it appears that the corps of Marshal Davossis, supported by a division of the army of Italy, forms its right wing; Massisan corps, which occupies the islands on the Danube, the capital country in the capital properties the islands on the Danube, supported by a division of the army of Italy, forms its right wing; Massisan corps, which occupies the islands on the Danube, supported by a division of the army of Italy, forms its right wing; Massisan corps, which occupies the islands on the Danube, while the country under Bessers, and Dake D'Abrantes is about to take the command of an army of refere upon the Rhine; while Marshal Kellerman is what a foattered force, endeavouring to overawe the infagent districts of Germany. The Decree annexing the Papal dominions to France is dated on the 17th of May, when Bonaparte was studied with sincess, and not, as has been supposed, by way of shewing the world how high he can carry his head after a check. In an article from Bavaria it is insinuated that negociations are going on; but we never can perfuse deviations are going on; but we never can perfuse of which the case of the territory.
