Phishing, he adds, was by no means in a formidable flate of defence; there were in the harbour a few hijs of war with French colours flying, and which, he underflood, the enemy intended to deltroy by five. The Maiter of the other welf-it that is arrived fuys, that when he left Flahing on Monday morning no defectal had been effected; but that a confiderable number of our boats were empleyed in taking foundings in the creeks and intels along the coast, preparatory to a landing, and the trausports, with the troops, were also taking advantageous positions contiguous to the parts mid accellible.

French papers have arrived to the 25th of laft month, and they completely put an end to all doubts with respect to the armifice, and the Austrian troops have excusated the Tyrolefe, the brave proup of the Tyrolefe. They were the fift to take up arms, they were the laft to lake the brave proup of the Tyrolefe. They were the fift to take up arms, they were the laft of lay them down. A middle every event they preferred their loyalty unbroken, their continuey unlaken. They did not wait for the countenance and support of regular troops—no shoner had the war broken out than they fore as one man, and with no other faccours than what they derived from their own gallant feelings, their harted of their new masters, and their attachment to their old, they cleared their country of the enemy, and returned with enthusian to their ancient allegiance. It does not appear that Bomparte land returned to Paris on the 25th. An article,
