HOUSE of LORDS, March 22. WILMOT'S DIVORCE BILL.

WILMOT'S DIVORCE BILL.

THE evidence who was partly examined on the Mencfday, finished his testimony, and another witness proving rather stronger to the same purport, and corroborating such circumstances as amounted to proof, their Lordships had no doubt on their minds of the Lady's guilt, and the Ell was therefore read a fecond time and ordered to be committed.

Mr. Graham made an able desence for the Lady, and with great ingenuity argued that the actual safe was not proved; but he acknowledged that her conduct was such as to debar her for ever from the return of her hulband's affections.

duct was fuch as to debar ner for ever from the return of her hubband's affections.

We are prevented from entering into the detail of this day's evidence, as it is imposfible for language to recite the facts without the groffel infult to the modeft and delicate feelings of our female readers.

HOUSE of COMMONS, March 22.

HONITON ELECTION COMMITTEE.

This Committee reported to the House, that "George Templar, Esq; is duly elected."

"That the petition of James Frujer, Esq; is not frivolous or vexatious."

After which the Speaker counted the House, and there being only eighty-five members present, they immediately adjourned till to-morrow.

LONDON, March 23.

Yefterday, at half palt two o'clock, the Queen held a Drawing-Room at St. James's, which being thin of company, clofed in half an hour.

The Duches of Hamilton, the Countes of Dartmonth, Vifcount Barnard, Ladies Lewisham, Dacre, F. Ratcliffe, and Jame Holliday, were at the Drawing-Room for the first time this feason.

The Marchione's of Bach attended the Queen as Lady of the Bedchamber, and Lady C. Waldegrave waited on the Princesses.

Very few Peers attended yesterday in the House of Lords. The business of Grin. Con. astrights them, and especially when it enters, as it has lately done, in the difgraceful garb of a livery.

At four o'clock the Drawing-Room broke up, when the King gave audiences to the Cabinet Ministers, and at five o'clock the Royal Family returned to Buckingham House.

Yetterday the West India Merchants and Planters met at the London Tavern, for the purpose of deliberating on the most proper measures to be adopted, in order to prevent the importation of Sugars from India.

Dr. Chilholm of Jamaica, expressed his wish that the petition which had been presented by the House of Astronby in Jamaica, in the year 1791, to the Earl of Estingham, declaring, "That the Abollion of the Slave Trade would prove ruinous and despressive to the Colony, and which he thought did them or Rear it is not to the thought did them or Rear it is not to the suddender of the Minister at the same time.
