It is proposed, that the Affessed Taxes shall be doubled, and ripled, and we believe in some instances quadrupled, according to the proportion which each householder pays. For example—they who pay a simal sum, will probably remain as they are, because it is to be supposed that their resources are not equal to any advance; those who pay a pain all sum, will probably remain as they are, because it is to be supposed that their resources are not equal to any advance; those who pay larger sums will be doubled, and foin proportion. Thus, Mr. Pitt's object is to lay the heaviet burthens on the rich.

The Duties to be proposed we understand to be as follows:—On Houles, Horses, Carriages, Servants, Watches, and Dogs, usually known by the denomination of the Assertion of the Assertion of the Assertion and the continue of the Assertion of the Assertion and the continue of the Assertion of

By letters from Copenhagen, it appears, that a monument is crected before the weitern gare, as memorial of the Abolition of Vaffatage by the fulbfeription of the finhabitants. It confills of an obelific, composed of Bornoolm flone, upon a figurar pediment of Norwegian marble, the four dies of which are ornamented with undeallions and inferiptions; one of them in Baffo Relievo, reprefents the Act of Manumillion, -another contains Juffice and its attributes :—a third bears this infeription, "The foundation of this monument was laid by Prince Frederic in 1792." On the fourth fide, "The grateful and devoted Citizens to Christian VII." At each corner of the pediments are figures in Italian marble, viz.—Fidelity, Valour, Agriculture, and Parriotifm. Tefferday morning at eleven o'clock, the Earl o'Mornington, and the Hon. Mr. Welley and ditte, embarring Admiral Sir H.
