THE REGENT'S DRAWING ROOM.

It relderation of his Royal Highera's birth Day.
In consequence of the lamented death of the Queen, in consequence of the lamented death of the Queen, in epiches of the prince Regent, guided by the precedent of Gorge II, who after the death of Queen Caraforte, held Drawing Rooms for the reception of Lades, judiciously resolved, for the encouragement of trade and manufactures, to hold a similar Court yesterday, on the oceasion of the eclebration of the notal day of his Royal Highness and the Queen's House was perperal for the purpose in an appropriate style. The morning was subsected histeninging of least all the usual State forms and military of the property of the purpose in the runging of least all the usual State forms and military of the total place, to the infinite gratification of the morning conceder for least all the suns State forms and military of the property of the property carriages, and walked from a considerable distance to the Pakers.

The Regent having received the congratulations of those entitled to the entrie, he proceeded to the grand solon and took his station in the front of the throne. The Princess Augusta took her station on the Regent's left. The Duchess of Gloucester, Princess Sophin of Gloucester, the Duke of Gloucester, the Dukes of York and Kent, principally cenained opposite the Regent. It wasone of the most brilliant and numeronsly attended Courts ever witurested. Besides the Members of the Speaker of the House of Commons, the Miges and Grown Lawyers, an unprecedented crowd of Noulity and Gentry were present.

The Judges met yesterday in the Treasury Chamber and chose their respective Summer Circuits as fol
