NEW LAMPS FOR OLD.

In the glorious days of good Queen Bess, long before the industrial era had begun or the "capitalist system" yet been thought of, an employment was rife in England. It was then that poor relief was first devised and, since the parish was the unit of society, it was natural that it should have been organised on a parochial basis.

Speaking at the luncheon, the Duke said that it was a great pleasure to him to visit Aylesbury and to take part in the civic week celebrations. He was a great believer in education and he had a very keen interest in the development and increase in the community that sense of responsibility without which no progress could be achieved.
