LONDON, August 9. BY Letters from Oftend, dated the 6th inflant, we learn, that the accounts of the fuccesses of the Royalifts are confirmed, and that moreover the Republican Army in La Vendee is disbanding itself; that of the North is following the example.

The people at Paris accuse Custine of being the occasion furrender of Mentz, and loudly call for his head. The fon of that General is arrefted.

The account of the diffmantling of Lifle by the French and the probable furrender of feveral of the fortified towns on the Frontiers, feems to gain ground.

We flop the prefs to flate, on the authority of a letter from Turin, brought by the Dutch mail, at a late hour this afternoon, that the English and Spanish Fleets, united, were off Toulon on the 21st of July, amounting to 78 fail, with many transports, having a number of land forces on board; so that we may expect daily to hear a descent has been made in that quarter. --- Toulon is the principal French Port in the Mediterranean.

On the morning of the 31ft ult. Coffine was removed from the Abbey prifon to that of the Conciergerie, and he is fupposed to have already had his first hearing.

If any thing were wanting to unite all good men against the French, it would be the horrid inpiety of which they are now guilty in their posthumous honour of the moniter Marat. There is fomething fo daringly impious in their proceedings, that the mind is slupissed with altonishment, and instance with indignation.

No farther accounts from the armies had reached town last night at a late hour.

A springed young Nobleman has offered to raise a Regiment of Cavalry at his own expence, and to take the Officers from Half-pay: This offer, it is prefumed, will be accepted.

Officers from Half-pay: This offer, it is prefumed, will be accepted. Yeflerday there was a Council at the Secretary of State's Office, Whitehall, which was attended by all the Cabinet Miniflers in town, and fat till two o'clock, when letters were fent to Mr. Eden, K. B. his Majefly's envoy at Berlin. Admiral Gardner, it is now confirmed, had actually made a landing at Martinico, but on finding the Royaltist too feeble to give the aid which he expected, and that his fingle force mult prove inefficient, be prudently withdrew the troops which had been landed, and returned to Barbadoes.

There was no mail yefterday from Ireland; we are therefore as yet denied the means of contradicting from authority, the report, improbable as it prefented iffelf in the fifd inflance, of a French Fleet menacing a defeent upon that coalt.

As Martinico is probably by this time in British pofupon that coalt.

As Martinico is probably by this time in Britift poffelion, the following thort, but accurate account of that island, may be acceptable. Martinico is well fortified by nature and art. The finor on both fiels is indented with numberless bays, running far up into the country; and the fands, which only discover themselves at low water, form in many places a hidden and almost infurmountable barrier. A ridge of inaccessible mountains run N. W. and the fands, which only discover themselves at low water, form in many places a hidden and almost infurmountable barrier. A ridge of inaccessible mountains run N. W. and anumerous garrisons of vectors regiments, under the regal government, amounting to 15,000 men, besides 16,000 effelses commonly called militia, who were all disciplined every fortnight in companies, mustered every fortnights fusiciently the inhabitants with victuals, likewise sish, fowl, and a variety of game. Fortney and the companies of the chief engineers of Januaica; all the bastions are squares, the half monons before the curtains are demi-squares; the lunettes and tennilles are squares, as are all the different portions of the fort, which was defended, when taken by a train of 300 pieces of canon, some of them 48 pounders, and a garrison of sive regiments, consisting of 3750 men. It is fixty-five miles in length, and near thirty in breadth.

cart, and Mary Howe, dined at the Queen's Lodge.

His Mijelly returned from the Levee this evening about fix, in the midd of as tremendous a florm of thunder, lightning, and rain, as has been experienced here for many years.—The rain continued falling in torrents, without intermiftion, for feveral hours.

Brighthelmiltone, Angulf 7. The weather being at lad sofpicious, the publick breakfaft at the Grove, fo long announced, and fo impatiently expected, took place yellerday. All that is gay and fafthionable in Brighton were here colleded into one fpot. The Prince, the Duke of Marlborough, Lord and Lady Carlifle, Lord Mornington, Lord and Lady Jerfey, Lord Morpeth, Lord Pelham, &c. all agreed in approving the elegance of the entertainment. The Prince is much attached to the Camp, and confantly wears his uniform. Lord Carlifle wears the Windfor frock, plain blue, with fearlet cuff and collar. We hear no more of the intended vifit of the Royal Family. As the Prince refides in his Marquer, the Marine Pavilion will be entitely fit for fervice.

Drover, Angulf 7. All the armed cutters and tenders rine rayinon will be entitely fit for fervice.

Dover, Angul 7. All the armed cutters and tenders have this day received orders to cruize off Dunkirk, with intent to intercept the French fhipping that may leave that port. An attack on the place feems therefore determined on.
